TASTING NOTES

Intense and bright pink color. On the nose, a bouquet of fruity aromas with hints of citrus, strawberries, and white flowers. On the palate the wine is mineral, savory, and balanced.

Elena Fucci

Aglianico del Vulture Titolo Pink Edition

COUNTRY

Italy

ABV

12.5%

REGION

Basilicata

VARIETALS

100% Aglianico

APPELLATION

Basilicata Rosato IGT

WINERY

The Fucci family has lived on their estate in Basilicata since 1960, when Elena's grandfather bought six hectares of vineyards at the highest part Contrada Solagna of Titolo, at the foot of Mount Vulture (an extinct volcano). Though it wasn't until the 2000 vintage that the full potential of the domain's 70-year-old Aglianico vines was properly explored. The family was going through the process of selling the estate when Elena made the last-minute decision to take on the property herself, with the intention of developing the vineyard and devoting herself to the land that she grew up loving so dearly. Simply walking through the vineyard rows at Elena Fucci is a fascinating history lesson; the terrain is volcanic, the soil is mineral, dark in color, and pozzolanica, which clearly catalogues in its layers the history and life of the Vulture volcano, visible just a few hundred meters away. This fascinating terroir translates to a fascinating wine in the glass.

CULTIVATION

Vineyards located in Solagna del Titolo, at 600 meters altitude with South and South-East exposure. The soil is pozzolanica, a mix of ashes, lapilli, and clay. Vines are farmed organically and grown on guyot using lower yields which positively impacts grape quality. Beans are grown in between vine rows.

VINIFICATION

Grapes are manually harvested, destemmed, and cryomacerated in steel tanks for 4 days.

AGING

Aged in bottle for 2 months before release
